LOWELL, Mass.-Work begins here this week on the abolishing of five steam railroad grade crossings, which, from a for Lowell.

Two of the five crossings are located on the New York, New Haven & Hart-New Haven system do not present undue | changed. difficulties to the engineers and will be completed within a period of four months, according to the authorities.

Those on the Boston & Maine system will not be completed at best before Cambridge. The position that he takes this right is refused not by a board or next December.

The estimated cost of the work is $400,000. Of this sum $114,000 will be expended on the Plain and Lincoln expended on the Plain and Lincoln streets crossings on the New Haven system, $81,000 on the Walker street and $190,000 on the School street crossing on the B. & M. system. Sixty-five per cent of the total cost of all improvements will fall on the railroads, 25 per cent on the state and 10 per cent on the city of Lowell.

The most difficult problem of all, work upon which will not begin for at least a year, comes at Middlesex street, one of the principal business thoroughfares of the city and the location of the Lowell station of the Boston & Maine passes over the tracks of the railroad Liverpool. on a bridge above the level of the station roof. The Walker street crossing on the Boston & Maine road presents a similar problem which will be solved in a similar way. The School street crossing is, however, more difficult of solution.

The grade of the street will be raise for a distance of 1100 feet and will be carried on a steel and reinforced concrete treatle, with earth filling for only a short distance on either end. Bridges will be provided for free access to the gas works yard and the two freight yards, and for the main line of the railroad and the canal. Runways will also be built connecting School street on its new grade with the ground level. It will take at least a year to complete the work.

All of the work will be done under contract let out by the railroads. Plans at city hall have been approved by the roads, the city and the state.

POSTPONE HEARINGS TODAY ON BROCKTON EXPRESS RATE FIGHT

Interstate Commerce Commissioner Prouty Grants the Adams Company Until Aug. 29 to Prepare Defense

INCREASE ALLEGED

Shoe Men of Towns South of Boston File Specific Information With the United States Board.

Interstate Commissioner harles A. Prouty today continued the nearing at the Federal building on the petition filed by shoe manufacturers and merchants of Brockton, Whitman and Rockland against the Adams Express Company, alleging that the defendant is charging excessive rates for merchandise shipped between New York and Brockton, Whitman and Rockland, until Aug. 29, at the request of counsel for the defendant.

The petitioners declared at the hearing today that the Merchants Despatch Company of Boston, which was absorbed by the Adams Express Company on March 1, charged 75 cents per hundredweight for goods shipped from New York to Brockton prior to March 1, but that as soon as the Adams Express Company took over the business the rate was increased to $1 per hundredweight. The petitioners claimed that the defendants discontinued on March 1 shipments of merchandise on the former rail and water route to and from New York by way of Fall River and that consequently the only way that shippers from the petitioners' place of business could send merchandise to New York was by an all rail route.

It was alleged by the petitioners that if a business man wished to send goods from Brockton, Whitman and Rockland by the defendant's line the shipper must load his goods before noon in order to have them delivered in New York the following day at 2 p. m. By the old Fall River route, it was said, the shipper could load his goods up to 5 p. m. and have them delivered in New York at noon the following day. Among those who appeared at the hearing today were C. J. Colton, transportation manager of the Regal Shoe Company of Whitman; E. H. Warmsley, credit man for the same company; Freesembled to receive their diplomas, honors man B. Small, transportation manager also conferred upon Jane Addams, presi- pany of Brockton; C. R. > The Oak Grove Creamery, represented by Attorney Edward F. McClennon of Boston and Allen Gouldstone, charged that the Adams Express Company makes excessive rates, and that the creamery is seeking to get a lower rate on the shipment of cake as in the case of bread. The creamery company contends that cake is practically of the same material as bread, and ought to be shipped at the company was called and said that cake William Bradley Coley of New York, is shipped in regular bread hampers, and that when the basic rate is 75 cents per hundred pounds the express company charges 25 cents for bread and 47 cents for cake. Where the basic rate is $1.20 the charge is 33 cents for bread and 94 cents for cake. So that the rate for cake is excessive compared with that for bread, he said.

Commissioner Prouty proposed that the express company might carry cake at what he called a merchandise net rate and bread at a more general special gross rate, which would do away with the mixed shipment rate.

Richard J. Drown of the National Claims Bureau of New York is handling the manufacturers' side of the case, and Attorney Harrison is counsel for the Adams Express Company.

The hearing in the case of the Oak irove Creamery Company was continued to Aug. 15 to allow defendants to file briefs. The complainant is given until Sept. 1 to argue.

HARVARD BASEBALL SOUAD HOLDS LAST PRACTISE TODAY

Yale Wins First Game, Driv-

The Harvard varsity baseball team holds its last practise of the year on Soldiers field this afternoon in preparation for the second game of the Yale series which takes place in Cambridge tomorrow afternoon at 2. Hicks will start the game for Harvard and the crimson hopes to make a much better showing on its home diamond than was Yale won the first game by a score of McLaughlin started to pitch for Harvard Tuesday and in the second and third innings was hit safely 12 times. Today the winners will meet Miss Merrick and Miss Ross of the Philainning and eight more in the third. Phipps and Miss Griscom. The sum-Long then took McLaughlin's place, but was relieved by Boyer when one man was out in the eighth. The two prevented any further scoring.

Tomers pitched five innings for Yale allowing only two hits. Harvard scored a rim off him in the fourth inning and after Freeman was put in made three in the sixth and one more in the eighth,

Except for Yale's heavy hitting the game was poorly played, Both sides made numerous errors, but it was the hitting that determined the result. The big lead which Yale held after the third Inning was a hopeless handicap for Harvard to overcome.

A very large commencement crowd witnessed the contest and ground rules were necessary, which deprived Lanigan of a sure home run.

Thirteen of Yale's hits were made off McLaughlin and four off Long. Harvard got two hits of Tomers, one of them being Lauigan's three bagger. The four bases on balls which Freeman gave did not figure at all in the scoring.

Three Harvard players won their baseball H for the first nine, they being: S. C. Boyer '10 of Cambridge, G. P. Gardner, Jr., '10 of Boston, and E. V Long '10 of Marion, Ill. The summary: YALE.

BOSTON COMMERCE

The possibilities of the practical reformer of today in the field of political tion to indorse candidates for United and social improvements were set before the Boston Chamber of Commerce assembly by the Hon. Daniel C. Remick of New Hampshire at their regular biweekly meeting at the American house this noon. Mr. Remick also told of the achievements of his associates and himself in New Hampshire. The people of Littleton, N. H., know that they are winning, and before long they will be bigger, better and busier than Boston, according to Mr. Remick, who is an adopted son of that town. Littleton is 188 miles from tidewater, and all raw material for her mills has to be brought over the high grades of the Boston & Maine railroad, from Arkansas and foreign countries. Yet her citizens have in the last dozen years built municipal buildings, steel bridges in the place of wooden bridges, and macadamized and concreted the main street, which was only a muddy road at the start. Littleton has everything that Boston has, said Mr. Remick, except an art museum, the electric road, saloons and grafters.

"You have got to build up your manufactures," Mr. Remick continued, "and get the men of Boston to pay down the money to build the factories here instead of investing it in the West."

Mr. Remick advised the assembly to take the vacant land around Boston and build manufacturing plants upon it. He advocated a tax abatement for 10 years for new enterprises, claiming that more would be gained in the end from the taxes upon the new buildings which these companies would erect, and which would be taxed from the first.

"The people of Littleton," he said, want the Boston & Maine and New York, New Haven & Hartford to consolidate as fast as they can, because the Boston & Maine gives them very poor length in the Senate Tuesday afternoon on his amendment to the postal sav-ings bank bill, saying that all the objectionable features of the measure had been restored by the House. The pur-pose of the bill, he said, had become so positive as to remove money from communities rather than aid local commercial interests.

"The original objections to that feature of the bill," said Mr. Bacon, "have been increased tenfold by the House. All funds will be concentrated in the great money centers."

WHEN YOU VISIT THE RETAIL DISTRICT

Make It a Pleasure Trip

You Can--- If You Come to Our Stores

Take an elevator to our Fourth floor, then ride, or preferably, walk down, noticing the various exhibitions on each floor a continuous picture is spread out before you.

DEVOTE SOME TIME TO EXAMINING MERCHANDISE ON EACH FLOOR

Go to the LEATHER GOODS STORE, and ask to see a 50c pocket book. You will find it better than you secure elsewhere at the same expenditure. Then ask for one at $5.00—still the best value; thus you will get an idea of our qualities and the range of prices on staple lines.

Go to the RELIABLE LINEN STORE, making inquiry for our all-linen huck towel at 20c, and notice the quality and size. Just to further demonstrate our extensive stock of towels, we would appreciate it if you would look at a few of the satin damask towels at $2.00 each, as well as making minute examination of other lines at 25c, 371/2c, 50c, etc.

Go to the MEN'S STORE, a most attractive haberdashery, and view the profusion of shirts for summer wear. See the line of negligee shirts at 55c each, in assorted patterns, coat style, with attached cuffs. Then, too, an examination of the silk outing shirts at $3.00 will convince you of the style range in this one feature of our Men's Store.

Go to the HAIR GOODS STORE, where you will find nearly 20,000 pieces of human hair goods, known as "Sophia" Quality, guaranteed absolutely sanitary. The obliging saleswomen will show you a single puff at 45c as cheerfully as though you asked to see one of the large wavy switches at $49.95.

Go to the CARPET AND RUG STORE, whether you intend purchasing a floor-covering or not. Our stocks embrace a most pleasing array of imported and domestic pieces, in all the regulation sizes. You'll be agreeably surprised with our assortment of Oriental Rugs, ranging in prices, for the small rugs at $10.00 each, to the larger carpet-size Rugs at $400.00. We believe our collection of domestic rugs, including the small mats at $1.25, and on up to the finest 9x12 Saxony and French Wilton rugs at $50.00 and $55.00 each, will lend much to the enjoyment of your tour.

Go to the SILK UNDERSKIRT STORE, and let your critical eyes feast on a charming assemblage of petticoats. Those at $3.95 are proving very satisfactory, offering a choice of colors as well as blacks. Then asually take in all the elaborate creations in fancy models—a wonderful collection. You will greatly admire those at $16.50 and $20.00 each.

Go to the JEWELRY STORE, expecting and receiving one of the "treats" of your visit. You will be delighted with this artistic display, embracing, as it does, an exceptional variety of handsome articles for personal adornment. Don't fail to see the vast assortment of hatpins at 15c each, which affords as much

LONDON MOTOR CABS SHOW GAIN OVER ALL OTHER CONVEYANCES

LONDON-On the last day of May of this year the number of public conveyances in the streets of London amounted to 15,777, including motor cabs, horse cabs, omnibuses and tramway cars. According to the official figures published, there are at present on the London streets 5070 motor cabs, 2648 hansom cabs and 3066 four-wheelers.

From these figures it is clear that the hansom cab is gradually becoming a feature of the past, while the fourwheeler still holds its own to some extent, owing doubtless to its suitability for carrying luggage.

Some interesting figures included in the statistics show how rapidly the number of motor cabs plying for hire has increased during the last several years. It appears that on Jan. 1, 1904, there was only one motor cab on the streets. In 1905 there were two; in 1906, 10, and in 1907, 94. We then find a sudden and rapid increase, for on Jan. 1, 1908, there were 723 motor cabs; in 1909, Owing to the rapid development of the 2805, while on May 31 of this year there motor industry in general, and to the numerous improvements which are being As will be readily understood, the continually brought out whereby the dehorse cabs have in the meantime de- sign and construction of motor vehicles ereased from 11,404 on Jan. 1, 1904, to is being continually made more simple 8714 on May 31, 4910. In view of these and cheaper, it is only natural to assume figures one is tempted to wonder how many horse-driven cabs will be found on London streets a few years hence.

RAILROAD INSTITUTE ENDS ATLANTIC CIT CONVENTIONS TODAY

J. W. Marden, superintendent of the car department of the Boston & Maine. who represented that railroad in the forty-fourth annual convention, held at Atlantic City, of the Master Car Builders Association, of which organization he is a past president, said today on his return that it was a most success ful and instructive meeting. All of the railroads in the country are officially with the American Master Mechanics graph is as good a preacher as Savona-Association, Mr. Marden said, are the rola. The toot of the automobile's horn principal steam road mechanical associations in the country and constitute the Railroad Mechanical Institute. The convention ends today.

Mr. Marden was impressed by the very large exhibit of all kinds of machinery and tools which occupied the major part of the great $1,000,000 steel pier at Atlantic City. The many exhibits represented the output of manufacturing companies which deal in mechanical devices and materials such as are used on the railroads.

When the perfected airship nothing new which he deems will meet comes it will put an end, in a generation or two, to the remnants of barbarism, savagery and ignorance still left in the world. When all men can get together and understand each other, and talk matters over, the world will become one neighborhood, and every man will want to behave decently to his neighbors.

This is the season of annual conventions. People get together from all points of the compass in these conventions and talk matters over. Each one learns a thing or two he had never thought of; and if the general sum of human knowledge is not increased, the knowledge of individuals is sometimes considerably expanded.

The season of the American Library Association (which will open next week Acts of the Apostles alludes to this at Makinac) is always anticipated with Athenian attitude of mind in an appapleasure by good librarians. Raffia Is Effective as a Trimming

INTO the field of quick, effective decoration comes raffia as a first aid to the puzzled. With warm weather the idea of a cool trimming comes as a welcome note, and whether it be the decoration of the accessories, that after all are important as contributing factors in a general scheme, or the ever-present question of hat trimming, raffia is Influences Tend to the equally promising, says the Philadelphia North American.

It can be worked in conventional design on handbags or belts. The natural color can be combined with the brilliant hues, or there can be a combination of tones that will harmonize with the dress with which it is worn. Linen in gray, tan or white forms a splendid background for the working of a design. As trimming for hats the field is delightfully wide. Ribbon is decidedly improved by a chain stitching of the straw, while huge coin spots or blocks of color are easily worked on scarf ends or the loops of a bow.

Raffia can be made into pompons to trim the tailored hat, while entire shapes are easily constructed of plaited And, best of all, it is so inexpensive.

Benefit of College Girls

A FRATERNITY is a large secret so ciety, with branches-called "chapters"-1. various colleges, says the Woman's Home Companion. The fraternities flourish most conspicuously in the co-educational institutions. Here the girls, spurred by the presence of men, not only imitate their social organizations, but find in them a substitute for the class loyalty and dormitory comradeship which are so prominent in the colleges for girls alone. It is no just such considerations—the

NEW YORK-At the directors' meet fined to extra disbursements.

Doubt is now expressed as to ability 27 % of the corporation to establish a record in net this year. Less than six months ago it was believed earnings might run as high as $180,000,000, but based upon the showing in the first half, the management will be satisfied if they reach $15%,000,000, the yearly rate in the first half.

and second quarters. In 1907 the corporation showed $161, 000,000, and balance available for dividends 20.2 per cent on the preferred. Should earnings this year reach $155,000,-000, there would remain a balance for dividends of $98,000,000, equivalent to 27.2 per cent on the preferred.

From 1902 to 1910 inclusive, the latter estimated, the corporation averaged a balance for dividends of 20.7 on the preferred, within a shade of three times the 7 per cent a year required.

THE GRAIN MARKET.

C. F. & G. W. Eddy, Inc., of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, received the following from their Chicago correspondent:

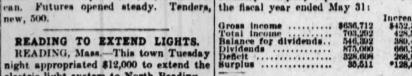

Wheat-A weather market is the most erratic kind of a market and today was such a complete reversal of the action of Tuesday as to be a strong confirmation of the irregularity of market movements on the weather. The development of lower temperatures in the Northwest, some reports of scattered showers, official prediction of general showers in the 99% Dakotas and western Minnesota and general showers in Manitoba caused a break of 2 to 3 cents a bushel with perfect stampede of yesterday's buyers to get out. Northwestern advices claim that the situation is critical and good rains must 67% come soon and this general to prevent very material damage. The weather in the winter wheat states was very favorable for the cutting and maturing of the crop and harvesting is making ex-ellent advancement. ket and there was a good deal of selling the night in the Tombs, Onts-Market was active and weak, prices breaking about I cent a bushel in the prospects of much more favorable weather conditions in the Northwest and also influenced by the weakness in corn and wheat. The Northwestern crop needs rain fully as much as the wheat crop.

ONE FIFTH OF ASSESSMENT PAID

Corporation Tax Payments Are Very Slow and Most of Them Thus Far Have Been Made Under Protest.

With eight days remaining before June 30, the final date for meeting the new federal corporation tax, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Gill of Boston states that there has been paid approximately 20 per cent of the total assess ment of $1,408,040 collectible by his office from corporations having their principal place of business in this state. The payments to date have been "under protest," and in numerous instances, where the tax has been assessed on a larger amount than the corporation has AN EXHIBITION reckoned as due, simultaneous claims have been filed for refunding the disputed excess.

It is probable that the Massachusetts returns to date would have been twice as large if it had not been for an anticipation on the part of the taxed concerns that collections would be halted by Congress at this session, ft is declared, however, that there is absolutely no likelihood of any such legislation being enacted and that the joint resolution, introduced last week by Senator Cullom of Illinois, to postpone payments of the tax until next January stands no chance of passage before adjourn-

Commissioner Gill expects that this force will shortly be confronted with an unusual rush of payers,

There will be no hesitation in pushing delinquents as soon as the 10 days of grace expire. If their taxes are not paid by July 10 they are liable for five per cent additional tax as well as for Be per cent interest for each month that per cent additional tax as well as for payment is withheld.

Records are now on file in Commissioner Gill's office of 9015 associations C which have a principal place of business in this state, but of this number only 2055 show net incomes above the exempted $5000. Profits for the year ended Dec. 31, 1909, on which the government has computed that I per cent is due, amount to $140,840,445.

SOME MACHINERY and other personal property. All at Woonsocket, Rhode Island.

OUITE AN EXTRAORDINARY OPPORTUNITY to purchase at unlimited public sale a first-class modern, complete and compara-tively new manufacturing parcel of real estate perfectly located in a nest of prosperous industries with unobstructed light on four sides because of streets and Blackstone River. In one of the best centers in America for labor and diversified industry, and now experiencing a growth remarkable for the importance and character of its enlargements and new plants. With the property upon its own premises is an almost over supply of filtered water suitable for most careful bleaching and even for dyeing and printing in delicate colors. The sale will take place upon the premises regardless of any condition of the weather, on Tuesday, the 28th day of June, 1910, commencing promptly at half-past two o'clock in the afternoon. Illustrated and descriptive catalogue in detail upon application at the office of the Auctioneers, where all inquiries must be made.

For-business—for investment—for improvement—they merit consideration and investigation. Not by any means a local proposition. The wharf property is the only wharf property on the dredged government harbor front in New London today not in permanent use, has 12 ft. of water at mean low water and a soft bottom. The two-lots of renting business property pay a handsome income as they are, but the location is ready and the conditions encourage modern improvement. The vacant lot is nearly square, has streets on three sides, spur track passing it, with the freight yard of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad at hand, and is opposite land of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad that reaches to wharves at tide water. Lot 1, Lot 2 and Lot 3 are adjoining lots, and until recently surveyed and divided for the purposes of this sale were one property, are within the reach of a single purchaser, have a combined frontage of 88 ft. on Bank Street between State and Howard Streets, and 87 ft. on harbor, line. The sale will take place at or near the respective premises regardless of any condition of the weather on Wednesday, the 29th day of June, 1910, beginning promptly at two o'clock in the afternoon with Lot 1. WOOL INERT IN CONSEQUENCE OF ENHANCED COST OF LIVING close with the wool trade making a effected. comparatively inactive showing and Conditions governing territory wool facing a period of uncertainty such as transactions are equally applicable to very few of the dealers anticipated at those in fleeces. Low offers are made the beginning of 1910.

eral survey of the situation seems to latter move takes place. wool schedules in the tariff, but a genindicate that very little has been promulgated or advocated along this line ciously by the trade as a whole.

July disbursements for interest and economies are possible in clothing lines tivity. Storage capacity in Boston will happroximate $200,000,000, when few or none may be deemed adalso be in great demand while the holdvisable in food, fuel or shelter. The goods trade is exceedingly light this year compared with the volume of business in normal years, and conditions will be greater during July and August are shaped by this feature of the market quite noticeably. Many manufac-turers are running only to 75 per cent or less of capacity and the new lightweight lines now opening are the subject of much conjecture, not as to their desirability or value, but regarding their marketability at a fair margin of profit. Until a better understanding is reached in this respect dealers foresee little change. Quotations are above consumers' views all along the line. Growers have yielded much on raw material, but buyers for eastern houses continue to seek further concessions. Dealers in wool have reduced prices to reduce stocks on hand, and have named low figures in numerous instances, so that clips disposed of cannot be replaced on a satisfactory basis.

Manufacturers have joined the movement, revising their calculations, fabrics being offered about 10 per cent under quotations of a year ago, and clothiers are making corresponding changes in their prospective schedules on the finished product. Good quantities of wool are in sight to meet whatever needs may arise. It is not believed that there will be any shortage, even in the event of an improvement in the absorption of new clips. The current supply, in view of the slackening demand, has proved of sufficient volume, especially in the line of imported stock, to warrant reshipment of some of the bales, to be sold abroad.

Advices from Europe denote that some nesitancy has been occasioned there by the American attitude toward the market. It seems absurd, however, for wners to hold foreign clips here or to buy more at unprofitable prices as long as a better market for them exists in London and elsewhere. Should the next London sales disclose ncrease of weakness in European wool marts still further declines may be ecorded here. The opening of the series, therefore, will be awaited with unusual interest. Shearing is drawing near its close in the Northwest, but buying lags as it has not done before in several years. For territory wools the sales that take place are on the basis of a landed cost clean in Boston ranging from 52 to 58 cents, staple wools fetching the equivalent of 57 to 58 cents. Manufacturers are doing some direct buying, and desirsome quarters by castern wool merchants

The first half of the year draws to a where a compromise on prices could be on all grades by eastern wool buyers, Some wool merchants attribute the most of them are turned down, and inertia to agitation for revision of the compromises must ensue or consignments follow. In the majority of cases the Even Montana wool, whose 35,000,000 pounds usually come forward freely mulgated or advocated along this line after shearing, is not likely to do so for some time past. The notion that this is the underlying cause of the prevailing quietness is not held very tenaville by the trade as a whole.

The Ancestry of American Presidents

The tracing by the Scottish Historical Review of Mr. Roosevelt's maternal ancestry back to the Scottish family of Stobo is a reminder that the ex-President himself, speaking in 1905 at a New York banquet, claimed relationship with Ireland, and directly with the O'Briens and the O'Neills, his Irish ancestors, he said, having emigrated to Pennsylvania from Ireland in the seventeenth century. There have been five other Presidents of Scotch-Irish descent-Jackson, Buchanan, Arthur, McKinley, and (Knox) Polk-and 14 of direct English descent, beginning with Washington and ending with President Taft. Of the 26 Presidents who have held office all except two had a British ancestry, and, curiously enough, Holland supplies the only continental connection with the presidency of the United States, in the persons of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Van Buren, who held office from 1837 to 1841. Can Conservation Be Theft?

On Monday, in the Senate, Mr. Borah made a speech that is illuminative. It shows that there are two sides to a question and how one can make either of those sides very convincing if one takes the trouble. Mr. Borah's speech is to be read carefully and the conclusions that he reaches, though they may not appeal to us, are nevertheless to be given their due consideration. The gravamen of his address is that by saving resources in the country by conservation, an act of the ft is thereby-committed against the human race. These words "might bear a pleasant application," and they are pretty broad to be used carelessly.

He first lays it down that the contention that the natural resources in a state belong to the whole people of the United States is all right in theory but in practise is utterly untrue. Immediately after that, he says that every site unused for water power is a subtraction from the sum of human happiness and prosperity. Now the whole is greater than a part; if the human race have an interest in a certain kind of resource, the nation must as well. Yet this does not agree with his first statement wherein he quickly disposes of the theory of national resources. We do not immediately argue from this that all the contentions of the friends of conservation are right, but merely draw attention to a contradiction that perhaps is only apparent.

Nor are we prepared to go all the way with the senator in the more restricted application of his words in this part of his speech. We have attempted before to point out that this is an age when, if we may use the term, the community is understanding the interrelation of its members. It is with this in mind that the friends of conservation seek to preserve those resources with which, up to this time, the nation has been so plentifully endowed. The right of a section of a community to its more immediate resources for profit may be completely overshadowed by their superior duty, first to receive and handle them honestly, and, second, in no case to waste them to the detriment of society at large. This country runs a good chance of being an economic wreck if citizens do not grasp the facts, first, that there is no such thing as a private decalogue, and, next, that no one has the right to waste. There was a time when the man that lived in Maine was separated from Idaho as from a country, but that time has gone, never to return. Today, the two must march shoulder to shoulder in a country that Clay and Buchanan would hardly recognize for wonder. We cannot separate our responsibility one to another, and by recognizing it we can make our country as great as we often affirm that it is.

The senator's contention that to withhold sites for waterpower from the use of states is a violation of every principle of the constitution, involves questions of very wide scope indeed. The most enthusiastic advocate of strict construction would not argue that the conditions are the same in this country as they were in 1789, nor even in 1870, when the constitution was last amended. There has been since the first-named day a steady development, marked usually by progress, in politics, in physical expansion and in our economy. It cannot be said that, in as many words, authority to withhold sites for waterpower is granted in any section of our constitution. With the exception of such men as Hamilton and Jefferson, whose political imaginations gave them powers almost of prophecy, none thought of Idaho and the vast West, any more than they did of flying machines. But this might be applied to a hundred phases of our modern life as they are sought to be made amenable to our constitution. Bryce, Bagehot and Dicy, in fact all that have examined our constitutional law, have noticed this quality.

But let us leave on one side the question of direct authorization, there yet remains an aspect which, after all, is one that Senator Borah touches. He says that to withhold power sites violates the "principles" of the constitution. It has always been the peculiar genius of the men of the English-speaking race that they obeyed their own laws, yet made them and shaped them always to fit the day and its needs. This is true of the common law, it is true of the English constitution and of our own, though it is a written one. The Latin has always sought to bind himself by codes, the rigidity of which has often defeated the ends of legislation and sacrificed facts to syllogisms. The Louisiana purchase in Jefferson's time and the creation of the state of West Virginia at the time of the civil war are examples of an elasticity that obtains under our constitution. It is this fact, founded on the common sense of the people, that prevents our being helplessly bound by a body of rules of fundamental law that would be unchanging; a constitution is common sense in the last resort or it is nothing.

Supposing, then, that our constitutional rules are such as can cope with any new question, what cause in the problem under discussion is there for invoking the elasticity of our constitutional law? That cause is a moral one, or else a great hypocrisy is being acted. The senator has spoken of ripened lumber permitted to rot and coal beds going undeveloped, and has given us the idea that such things resulted from a denial of right to states and individuals. With all desire to be fair and courteous we cannot pretend that the public does not know what various district attorneys and various federal officials have told us on the subject of lumber and coal. This information has been supplemented in some cases by the sterner acts of the courts of law, and we feel quite safe in saying that if that portion of human happiness represented by the general people of the United States cannot be protected by the constitution, then that constitution is a good deal weaker instrument than we conceive it to be.

Action such as Senator Borah represents has been forced upon the government by two causes, the sheer necessity that resources for the whole country shall be preserved, and the fact that the people have a profound conviction that there exist those who would pillage those resources without any shame and with not much fear of punishment. We are bound to respect the senator's personal opinions, but before he changes those of a great many of his fellow citizens, he must give clearer and weightier reasons to persuade them that the West does not need the protection of a law that will force the individual to respect the state.

THE contract has been awarded for the building of the giant lock of the Panama canal, the price being $5,374,474. The cost seems large, but perhaps not too great when it is considered that this greatest of all locks is also the key to the whole Panama canal problem.

IT WOULD appear that his honor the mayor and the metropolitan park commission do not find themselves entirely in accord. The mayor and other gentlemen seek upon the evening of the Fourth of July to drive away the "black bat night," or so much of it as may infest the Charles River basin. They propose to do this with catherine wheels, flower pots, rockets and eke with Roman candles, furnishing to the citizens that are assembled about and upon the basin such a display of the innocent joy of pyrotechnics as shall be at once splendid, instructive and urbane. But the pyrotechnics in which his honor is interested may have their glory still obscured by other bats in the shape of the denial of the board of metropolitan park commissioners. It seems that they would cast a damper on the innocent plans of the friends of pyrotechnics by raising the specious objection that a spectator on the bank is worth two in the basin, and that if the display were given, the throng afloat in pinks, jolly-boats, gondolas and sampans might be more than the police could well handle. The banks themselves seem to be neutral territory; it is the placid bosom of the basin itself that is ruffled by the friends of the people.

Now it is plain enough that here is another case where a commission has been so unfortunate as not to agree with his honor the mayor. But it is to be observed that the commission will have a chance to retrieve itself, for the mayor is going to talk to it and argue with it. The commission is reasonable and willing to be enlightened, so that we can all hope for a happy issue. The mayor will argue that inasmuch as the city of Boston paid 62 per cent of the $4,000,000 the embankment cost, it is only right that the people of Boston should have the right to use the embankment on occasions like this.

The commission argues that great crowds are likely to be attracted by the display and that they may prove so numerous that the police cannot cope with them. But the mayor, as above, takes a constitutional stand and says that having paid for 62 per cent of the embankment the citizens have a right to use it. In the press of business and harassed by official cares, the mayor omitted to point out a sound method whereby 62 per cent of the embankment may be delimited, on which the freemen of the city of Boston may enjoy their rights. Such space once set aside, a happy asylum can be provided for all those that are irked by the harsh rules of boards and commissioners and yet would enjoy a constitutional guaranty.

On the other hand, we would point out to the park commission that his honor the mayor has not given any conclusive facts as to who paid for the water that is pent up by the embankment. We feel that here is a point of which the commission will do well to take advantage, otherwise they cannot withstand the onslaught of the representatives of 62 per cent. It will be a great pleasure to have these points argued and to have this question settled. This may be difficult for the moment, but one does not like to think what would be the complications had the citizens paid for but 50 per cent of the cost of the embankment.

Tree Growing in Texas COMMENTING on a recent editorial article in this journal with regard to the progress made in afforestation and general tree growing in Kansas and Nebraska—over the stretches of territory once known as the "Great American desert"—the Dallas (Tex.) Morning News calls attention to similar satisfactory achievements along this line in the Lone Star state, and particularly in that part of it called the Panhandle. We are informed by our contemporary that those who saw Kansas and Nebraska during the early stages of their transformation from "desert" to "garden spot" will find in the Texas Panhandle and plains country of today a reminder of that wonderful metamorphosis. "Shade trees set out from five to ten years ago have grown remarkably, and there is no question as to the feasibility of foresting the plains.

It is pleasant to read that literally millions of trees have been planted in that region, and that they adorn the fence rows and flank the roadways, and that other millions of fruit trees are prospering in a soil which was once deemed incapable of supporting tree life.

As on the "treeless plains" of the trans-Missouri country, so on the "treeless plains" of the Panhandle, trees and farm cultivation have wrought a wonderful change in the landscape. So great has the change been in the last ten years, indeed, that the face of the country would be almost unrecognizable to one who had not seen it since the beginning of the decade. What was once a bleak and monotonous outlook from hill to horizon has become a pastoral prospect. And in Texas, as in Kansas and Nebraska, all this has been brought about, in the main, by individual effort.

We have it on the word of what might be called an eye witness that the one municipality in the country that is, so to speak, saturated with federalism is governed in a manner rather irksome, if not positively obnoxious, to the sentiment of the freeborn American. In a case of this kind, the thing, of course, is the testimony. According to the Washington Herald, Washington, it seems, is so "regulated" that the police are compelled to give nearly one third of their compelled to give nearly one third of their time to offenses that would be regarded as too trivial for notice in other communities. To quote the Herald:

If a citizen would build a house or business block, he encounters regulations that harass him beyond endurance. If he would paint his residence or improve his lawn, he must comply with rules unknown in any rational philosophy or risk arrest. If he purchase an automobile, he is soon led to wonder why he did it, because of the countless official requirements he must observe, or be taken before a police judge. And to make the situation more aggravating, the tendency is toward additional regulations, or changed regulations, all the time.

This matter, of course, is of purely local consequence, but it has a bearing which is national, since it is graphically illustrative of bureaucratic influences even in a republic. "Regulation" is the shibboleth of the bureaucrat. But now and then a cry like that which is issuing from Washington at present rings out upon the clear air and awakens us to a realization of the fact that what we need as a people is not much and complicated and nagging "regulation," but the least and simplest government.

IF PRESIDENT TAFT is successful in defeating the tricks that are being employed to obstruct the passage of the postal savings bank bill, he may add to his other titles that of "Filibuster Buster."

THE first stage of the Albanian rising has come to an end. Mahmud Shevket, commander-in-chief of the army in the field and the secretary for war, has announced that active operations have ceased, though an army of occupation will remain in the country. This means to say that the government has inflicted what is considered the necessary amount of condign punishment on the tribes, and that as has been indicated all along in

The Albanian Rising and that, as has been indicated all along in these columns, the Albanians will not be pressed too far, but will be afforded the opportunity of making their peace. Any one who will read the words addressed by Mahmud Shevket, on the eve of his departure, to the revolting tribesmen, will find in them extraordinary testimony as to the accuracy of the news which has been supplied by this paper. The minister of war told the Albanians plainly that if they thought they were dealing any longer with the government of Abdul Hamid, they were making a serious mistake. They were dealing, he told them, on the contrary, with a government not only determined but prepared to make its authority respected, and he wound up with a phrase cast very much in the mold of that of the famous ambassador of Rome, when, having made a fold in his toga, he cried, "Take whichever you prefer, peace or war."

The fact is that the Constantinople cabinet is perfectly aware that it has pushed the Albanians far enough. The punitive army has occupied the villages in the low country, burned the houses of the tribesmen absent in the rebel ranks, and collected the arms of all those caught in the sweeping movements. It is probably quite true, as has been said, that the arms which have been surrendered would be more valuable to a museum than to an arsenal. It by no means follows from this, however, that the tribesmen are well supplied either with arms or ammunition; indeed, the contrary is the exact truth. Pent up in the mountains, with their villages and markets in the hands of the army of occupation, the position of the rebels is not a desirable one. It was by just such means that the great proconsuls of the Punjab brought the trans-Indus mountaineers to submission, and if the Turkish officers act with anything approaching the judgment of men such as Herbert Edwardes, the result will be very much the same. Like McMahon, in the Malakoff, the Turkish colonels will reiterate, "j'y suis, j'y reste," until such a time as the Albanians make their

The second act, and by far the more difficult act of the drama for the cabinet in Constantinople to play, is the act of pacification which is before them. The methods of Abdul Hamid have been cast overboard, and the wounded susceptibilities of the tribes can no longer be placated with decorations and bribes. The rebels have been chastened in a way which was at once unexpected and unusual, and the soreness of the punishment will only be removed in proportion as the cabinet undertakes reforms of a real and of a substantial nature. It is in proportion as the role of the soldier gives place to that of the statesman that the real difficulties of the situation will be encountered, and it is not too much to say that, though the effect may not be immediate, on the measures to be adopted rests the future of Albania as a loyal province of the Ottoman empire, or as a province which has joined in the cry of so many others for political freedom.

THE sailing from New York for Europe of as many as 1500 tourists in a single day not only indicates that times must be pretty good in this country, but that with the incoming of so much American money they are sure to be quite good on the other side of the Atlantic also.

The Two New States PRESIDENT TAFT has affixed his signature to the bill granting statehood to Arizona and New Mexico, and this fact of itself is sufficient to draw toward them a larger share of public attention than they have heretofore received. They will be no richer in agricultural and mineral wealth as states than they were as territories; they will offer no greater inducements to the immigrant; nevertheless, admission to the Union unquestionably carries with it a prestige that in the eyes of the settler and the investor becomes an actual asset.

Both of the territories have been making rapid advancement during the last ten years. Arizona has now a population close to 160,000; New Mexico's population approximates 230,000 at the present time. The class of immigrants flocking toward the two is excellent. Eastern and western capital is finding profitable employment in the development of towns and cities and industries. The mineral deposits of the territories have barely been scratched so far. The opportunities for pasturing cattle in both of them would, if all others were lacking, produce wealth enough to provide comfortably for many times the present population.

The political future of both Arizona and New Mexico must for some time to come remain a matter of doubt. Much will depend upon the sources of immigration. The territorial Legislature of Arizona in 1909 was composed of ten Democrats and two Republicans in the Council and seventeen Democrats and seven Republicans in the House; in the same year the territorial Legislature of New Mexico was composed of nine Republicans and three Democrats in the Senate, and twenty Republicans and four Democrats in the House. In the election for congressman in 1908 in Arizona, Cameron, Republican, was elected over Smith, Democrat, by a plurality of only 708; at the same election in New Mexico, Andrews, Republican, was elected to Congress over Larrazola, Democrat, by the still narrower margin of 386 votes. The immigration to Arizona at present is largely from the middle West and the Northwest, which would indicate that this new state will eventually become safely Republican; the immigration into New Mexico, however, is mainly from Texas and the South, so that it may become eventually safely Democratic. In the first state election, however, the Republicans are very likely to secure the legislatures and consequently the four United States senators.

HEIGH HO! High old times in Ohio, where the Democrats in state convention appear to be much more certain of Harmon than they are of harmony. But realizing that the success of the one depends upon the maintenance of the other, it seems likely that they will prefer to pull together rather than to pull their party hopes of success to pieces.

THE THEORY that preparations for war are the best assurances for peace was combated by Justice Henry B. Brown of the supreme court of the United States in his address before the graduating class of the Yale law school this week. He thinks the boy with the fine new jack-knife is pretty apt to be whittling something.
